Taft

6'4 Junior

Matt Lesch, a junior guard at Chicago Taft High School, is one of the most underrated guards in the city. Currently, Lesch is averaging 12 points, 5 assists, and 4 rebounds per game. Recently, Lesch scored 16 points and 15 points respectively in wins over Fenton and Northside College Prep. His shooting and play making opportunities help to spark a lot of scoring opportunities for the Eagles. Although this is Lesch's first year on varsity, the future is bright for this young guard, and he is a player that fans should keep an eye on during the Hardwood Classic and beyond.
